All direct State bonds except the bonds in aid of railroads are to be taken up and new bonds issued. They are to bear interest from [illegible] at two per cent. for five years, four per cent. for ten years and five per cent. for fifteen [illegible]. All past due interest upon these is to be given up and canceled. The bond holders of the Alabama and Chattanooga Railroad are to surrender the bonds issued by the State in aid of that road and those endorsed by the State and take the road and its franchises and land and receive in addition one million of bonds to bear interest as the other new bonds.

I have found what is certainly as rich diggings as any one could wish from brief prospecting."

A Missing Cashier.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 23.—Some days ago the Farmers' and Traders' Banks suspended. Its directors gave notice that they would soon be able to settle all indebtedness. It now seems that the accounts of the cashier, Rudolph A. Dyer, son of an old and respected citizen, disclose a deficiency of $30,000. He was to have met the directors on Monday to agree upon the means to make his account good, but he did not appear, and it now turns out that he left his home at Glendale, a few miles from the city, last Sunday, and has not been heard from, nor is it known where he is.

WASHINGTON CITY.

New Hampshire Supports Bristow.

A Washington special says a dispatch was received from New Hampshire by one of the Senators to the effect that if Bristow is forced out of the Cabinet, or [illegible], the State will be lost to the Republicans. It has caused a violent commotion in the Republican ranks, as the whisky folks have counted on Bristow's exit in ten days.

Political Affairs in Louisiana.

The Tribune's Washington special says the present condition of political affairs in Louisiana causes much solicitude to the Republican and Democratic politicians in Washington. A very strong sentiment seems to prevail among the conservatives of Louisiana in favor of the impeachment of Gov. Kellogg, Lieut. Governor Antoine and the [illegible] of the Senate. This sentiment is approved [illegible] by some of the most conservative of the Louisiana politicians now at Washington. The leading members of the Democratic party, including Speaker Kerr and the most influential men representing both the Northern and Southern States, are of opinion that any extreme measure at this time would result in great harm to the Democratic party at large. The conservatives who favor the impeachment of Governor Kellogg assert that they do not propose to be guided in any way by Wheeler compromises. The leading Democrats in Washington are opposed to this impeachment movement, because they fear, however just the cause of the conservatives may be, it will be impossible to convince Northern people that the Wheeler compromise has not been disregarded, and that the conservatives do not desire to obtain the political control by revolution, if revolution is necessary to accomplish their purposes.

Fremont Ready to Testify in the El Paso Matter.

General Fremont has arrived here, and it is understood he is ready to testify in the Memphis and El Paso matter. The members of the judiciary committee, however, state that little can be expected, as he managed his business in such a way as to purposely avoid knowing of any of the details by which these results were sought or accomplished. [illegible] C. Patterson and Paige, the most important witnesses in this investigation, have found it necessary to go to Europe.

Fremont before the Railroad Committee.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—Gen. Fremont was before the committee of the House committee on judiciary to-day with reference to the [illegible] transcontinental railroad company. He testified he knew of no money having been improperly spent to influence the passage of the bill, and therefore could not furnish a list of beneficiaries as has been asked by the committee. He was closely questioned about the [illegible] of bonds of the Memphis and El Paso [illegible] in Europe, and said the company sold them to Paradies, of Paris, who was at the head of the stock exchange, and who put them on the market with the declaration that they were guaranteed by the United States, which was not so.

Fugitive Slave Question in Parliament.

LONDON, Feb. 22.—In the House of Commons to-day Whitbread, member for Bedford, moved a resolution in regard to the treatment of fugitive slaves, calling for the revocation of the recent circular issued by the Admiralty. He asserted that the instructions sent to the commanders of our ships of war indicated an inclination on the part of the government to abandon the traditional policy of England with regard to slavery.

[illegible]bury, member for Tamworth, a liberal [illegible], moved as an amendment to the resolution that it is desirable to await further information from the royal commission appointed to inquire into the subject. He maintained that the [illegible] contrasted favorably with those issued by the Liberal government. He argued that when the United States and Russia were great slave owning powers they would not have tolerated the high-handed doctrines which were now being proclaimed. It would not be creditable for England to take up a position now [illegible]

PLYMOUTH ADVISORY COUNCIL.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—The entire morning session was consumed in the discussion of the reports presented by the committees on 2d and 4th questions. The report on the former question is in the negative, and therefore favors Plymouth Church. The committee of nine who are to prepare a final report of the council was appointed, but the only names which could be got as being members were those of Porter, Fairchild, Bacon and Bingley. At the afternoon session the report of the committee on the fourth question was taken up and adopted without much discussion. This question related to the calling of the mutual council requested by ex-Deacon Wm. F. West, and in it the church asked if it should have called the mutual council when requested to do so by a member who had not verbally submitted any charges against the pastor, and when such request was made more than one year after the investigation had been held by the church itself, in which the pastor had been sustained. The committee to whom was referred the communication sent to the council by Deacon West report that the action of the church was proper and just.

The report of the committee on the 5th question, relating to the calling of Mrs. Moulton's mutual council, and in which the church asked whether it had acted rightly and properly, or if there was any error on its part which should be corrected, sustains the action of the church and says that the committee [illegible] satisfied that Plymouth Church was anxious to have the mutual council called. They also state it as their belief that had [illegible] not withdrawn so soon the council would have been called. This report was also adopted, and without much discussion.

The report of the committee on question No. 6 was then taken up. The question is as follows: Has Plymouth church in the principles and rules which it has provided for the maintenance of order and the administration of discipline, or in any known cases of its administration under those principles and rules, gone beyond its rights as a church of Christ so as justly to forfeit its claim to the confidence and fellowship of Congregational churches? The report on this question sets forth that the committee are satisfied that there seems to be no absolute necessity of re-opening the case, but inasmuch as there are so many suspicious claims and rumors, allegations, [illegible] recommends that the council appoint a committee of three to advise Plymouth church that it would be well to select a committee of five from the list of eminent persons which [illegible] shall be to hear all the evidence that can be collected and to adjudicate finally upon the case.

It is stated that Plymouth Church has sent to the council [illegible]

NOTES ON LONDON.

[From a Special Correspondent to the Tribune.]

LONDON, Jan. 7-10.—Unfurled an Englishman's umbrella is his castle; folded, it becomes his third leg. Life he might yield to an imperative demand; his umbrella, never. "Return with your shield or on it," was the Spartan mother's adjuration to her son at parting. Similarly we may suppose the British matron to instruct her gallant youth when he goes forth umbrella in hand, conquering and to conquer. Not only a weapon of defense, it becomes one of serious offense at times. Thus, when he places it in rest, as did the knight of old, his lance in the good sociable times when spearing people was accounted no sin, and goes charging down Pall Mall or Piccadilly, 'twer better to encounter Sir Launcelot's self or the great Gawain, harness on back, tilting in mad career. One might get out of the way of the Roman chariot, armed with scythes, whereof old historians speak, I suppose, for that drove straight onward, but the Englishman with an umbrella under his arm frisks about and rakes the eyes on all sides of him; one might as well try to dodge the fire of a mitrailleuse, mounted on the back of a restive donkey. It is much better to stand still and let him spear you through and bear one of your eyes away on the point of his weapon—as boys on the merry-go-around do the rings at which they ride—and beg your pardon afterward (which he is sure to do) and so have done with it!

Or if you will revenge yourself in kind, as most of our countrymen do, indeed, equip yourself with an umbrella, and panoplied in an ulster, with a chimney pot hat jammed down over your eyes, stream out upon the streets and flare through the fog comet like—a baleful orb, shot madly from its sphere, to affright the world. The average American can be quite as awkward and disagreeable as any to the manner born if he sets out with the deliberate intention of being genteel and graceful, after the custom of the country which he happens to be in! You will notice, however, that the Englishman, unlike our people, never seems to have a sense that he is in any way making himself ridiculous. He will say or do the most absurd things with the unconscious air of those who do good by stealth, and would blush to find it fame. When he visits America he is never disturbed by the thought that people may be laughing at him. He never seeks out a tailor at once and demands to be dressed like the natives; it is quite enough for him that his costume be that which was considered the correct thing in London. It not like unto that worn in New York, it is equally unlike that worn in the capital of Ashantee, and he falls back on the reflection that it is not his fault that these countries are as yet less civilized than his own. Here at home, too, he puts on pretty much what he pleases and does very much as he elects to do. He mounts an ulster of gigantic plaid and striking color, sweeping the ground, perhaps, and with a Scotch cap that lies on his head like an acorn cup on a kidney potato, goes calmly out upon parade. No one laughs at him; the idea that any one could do so never occurs to him, even the small boys of the street do not follow him and ask where he buys his clothes. So when he sets out for Switzerland, in tourist costume, with walking shoes which cast sudden and strange shadows over the pavement, a hat box in one hand, an alpen stock in the other, his bath tub under his arm, umbrella strapped to his back, a telescope slung over his shoulder, and the whole crowned with a cotton hat imported from Calcutta, the idea that he cuts a queer figure never crosses his placid mind, and he jumps into a cab with all his bundles and drives off to the station with all his might, thinking of nothing but being comfortable, and troubled by the thought that he may lose some of his luggage.

Satire the while does not perch on his shoulder and shout in his ear "what a guy!" An American, on the other hand, setting out on such a journey would sooner leave his shirt at home than run the risk of being laughed at by strangers for taking it along. So, too, the city merchant, when he chaffers with an omnibus guard or some purveyor of cats' meat over an overcharge of a penny. For the fact that bystanders may think him "small," may imagine that he is wasting time in pursuit of a penny that might better be employed in making a shilling, he cares not at all; prominent in his mind stands forth only the single idea that a Briton is being [illegible] and until he gets his rights not one of his sturdy pegs will he stir. And bystanders all sympathize with him, for there is nothing more sacred in a Briton's mind than a penny—unless it be a sixpence. And before he will be [illegible] kept out of either he will resolve [illegible] with extended hand till the [illegible] drops powerless by his side; then he will bring his wrong before a Lord Chief Baron of the Kingdom.

And I rather like this falling back on what one individually knows or thinks to be right, regardless of the [illegible] of the crowd [illegible]

The [illegible] says the [illegible] plowing [illegible] Walla Walla valley last week [illegible]

THE MAJESTY OF THE PEOPLE.

The following article, which we have slightly abridged from the original, appeared in the New York Tribune, and is worthy of the perusal of our readers:

There is no community in the world in which there is so much talk about "the people" as in ours, and yet when Mr. Bird said the other day in the course of his speech, "I salute the august majesty of the people," there was something in the time, place and occasion which gave the words remarkable freshness and force. They were listened to, we trust, with a feeling of rebuke by scores of men who all their lives have hailed nothing more august than the majesty of party—by men who when they say "people" mean "party," and who regard their own party as alone entitled to service and salutation. They consider that political organization worthy of their praises which kindly sends them to Congress, and speeds them on the way of rising in the world. Those who do not vote for them they reckon as mob-clubs, ignorant, deluded, unintelligent and not exactly honest. Caucus and convention, in the eyes of these gentlemen, are far more venerable bodies than either the Senate or the House. They set up a fiction that the safety and prosperity of the country depends upon the triumph of their side, which is a half modest way of saying that our salvation depends upon the election of the gentlemen themselves. Nothing of course could be more absurd. If, this morning, we could take fifty members out of the House of Representatives and put in their places fifty other members who never were heard of before ten miles from their homesteads, the House would be no better and no worse for the change. Again, if both parties to-day should cease to exist, should never hold another caucus, should die the death of the Federalists or the Whigs, does anybody suppose that the country would not get on tolerably well? Why, nothing would be gone but a couple of names and a few catch-words and several ancient fuglemen, newspapers and pensioners; the people who make and unmake parties would remain. The truth is, while the people always remain, there is nothing less certain of perpetuity than a party, or, to put it in another way, there is nothing more certain of dissolution. Where are the Federalists? the old Jeffersonian or Jacksonian Democrats? the Burrites? the anti-Masons? the Whigs? the Know Nothings? the Barnburners? the Hard Shells? Dead upon the field of honor or of dishonor, as the case may be. They proclaimed that the land would go to destruction without them; they announced themselves in possession of the sole secret of good government; they arrogated to themselves all the talent, foresight, patriotism, honesty, and other the like delicacies of the season; they canvassed, appealed, denounced, argued, and made every canvass one long rampage. Sometimes they were victorious and sometimes otherwise, but the day came when they were neither, and were in fact nothing. And where are they now?

Parties disappear; the people remain. Parties are creatures; the people only are creators. Parties are the product of circumstances; the people always reserve the power of changing their minds, and any change may consign a party to oblivion. If we take up a file of any political newspaper twenty years old, what passionate diatribes, what fierce dithyrambics, what typographical agonies of enthusiasm do we discover! We can remember when a party newspaper on the morning of election day, not merely in the rural districts but here in New York, looked like a handbill, and when it always predicted as the dire result of the defeat of its candidates sedition, privy conspiracy and rebellion, plague, pestilence and famine, battle and murder, and all possible evil and mischief. The handbills were, so to speak, convertible. Taken together they did not give the country a lone some chance.

We have had a century of politics of this sort, with many redeeming intervals of recuperative good sense, during which the people have taken public affairs out of the hands of mere politicians. Nobody who reads history can doubt the decided disinclination of the majority of American citizens to have any thing to do with a party which has ceased to be trustworthy and useful. The Republican leaders profess to consider their party invincible and immortal; the Democrats professed to believe the same of theirs up to the time of the defeat of 1860, and subsequent successes made them as confident as ever. But there always will come a time when postmasters, collectors, committees and members of Congress cannot save. The people are over all. Their differences may be reconciled. With them a fusion of conflicting elements is always possible. Their allegiance is always temporary and conditional, and the honorable member who talks the most confidently in Washington about carrying his district in his pocket is usually the most terribly afraid of his constituents. He too salutes in his heart the august majesty of the people.

A NEW USE FOR SLAG.

We copy the following from the London Times of Jan. 6, which describes a very valuable invention:

SILICATE COTTON.

The utilization of blast furnace slag has for many years past occupied the attention alike of ironmasters and inventors, but, although this waste product has to some extent been applied to economic purposes, the enormous slag deposits in the iron districts still continue for the most part to increase. Processes for converting this refractory material into sand, and subsequently into bricks, mortar, concrete and cement, are being employed on a practical scale both in England and on the Continent. In Belgium it is likewise used in the manufacture of glass, contracts being entered into with the proprietors of blast furnaces for a regular supply. Another more recent and more singular application of this dense and brittle substance is that of a clothing for steam boilers and steam pipes in order to prevent radiation and consequent loss of heat. To produce the slag in a proper condition for this purpose a blast of steam, water or air is forced into the stream of viscous slag as it is run from the furnace. This peculiar treatment imparts to the slag a finely divided character and it assumes a fibrous form and appearance somewhat similar to that of spun glass. This fibrous slag is a bad conductor of heat and has been used with success on the Continent for several years past for the purposes first indicated, being then known as "mineral wool." Herr Krupp of Essen [illegible] directed his attention to its production, and for the last three years the boilers and steam pipes at the extensive steel works have been clothed with this substance, to which he has given the name of "silicate cotton." Herr Krupp has also supplied this material to some of the large steam manufacturing establishments in Europe, where it has been adopted with perfectly satisfactory result. Having thus successfully applied it and having found it to be a very convenient way for utilizing the slag from his blast furnaces, Herr Krupp has now arranged for its introduction into England through Messrs. Creswell & Co., of London [illegible]. The special features of the silicate cotton are stated by Herr Krupp to be perfect incombustibility, since on coming into contact with fire it is unaltered; with comparative indestructibility, inasmuch as it is neither affected by change, heat or cold, water, acids or any chemical ingredients, to which it stands in about the same relative position as glass. It therefore presents several advantages over the ordinary boiler coatings, and is besides capable of extensive application in the arts and manufactures. It is very light, a ton covering 400 square feet even when applied 6 inches thick, and being a worthless material it does not disclose a leak in steam boilers. Being a perfect non-conductor of both heat and cold, its application to fire-proof structures, refrigerating apparatus and the like at once suggests itself. In short this new introduction promises to subserve many useful purposes.

The Utah Northern road is reported open and navigation resumed until the next snow flake obstructs it.

DUAL INDIVIDUALITY.

EXTRAORDINARY EXPERIENCE OF A YOUNG LADY—HOW MESMERISM EFFECTED A COMPLETE CHANGE IN HER PERSONALITY—SHE MARRIES IN HER ABNORMAL STATE.

The New York Mercury says: Among the passengers by the steamer for Liverpool was a lady whose history is certainly one of the most remarkable, if not the most incredible, on record. It is thus related:

Some years since a ship carpenter at Sunderland, England, turned lecturer. His name was Anthony J. Oliver, and the subject of his lecture was "Mesmerism." He was a great reader and an extraordinary mesmeric operator, and when he made his first appearance in public his manifestations of the odylic force astonished his audiences. His progress through the towns of the north of England was one continued harvest of shekels.

Old and young of both sexes—doctors, lawyers, clergymen and scientists—went to scoff, but were spellbound by his mesmeric power. Among others in Newcastle, Miss Jennie Robson was a profound admirer of Mr. Oliver. So great was the influence over her that by the force of his will he could, at the distance of a mile or over, induce the mesmeric sleep and compel her to proceed to him. This extraordinary fact was demonstrated in the presence of a committee of scientific experts. On one of these occasions she climbed a wall seven feet in hight and fell head foremost to the ground. She was taken up senseless and medical attendance was summoned, but in vain. She lay for six weeks in a condition bordering upon death. Just here it may be well to digress for a moment. Mr. Oliver afterward studied medicine in the Newcastle College of Medicine.

After the war in these United States he with a number of his English friends settled in Virginia. Every newspaper reader remembers his tragic end. He betrayed an aristocratic Virginian's daughter, and her father shot Oliver in cold blood. When Miss Robson recovered her consciousness she was blind and deaf, and she continued so for five or six weeks. The sense of hearing returned suddenly, but her sight returned more gradually and in the end perfectly. The most extraordinary feature of the case, however, was the fact that she had lost all recollection of her former life. She did not know a letter of the alphabet and she could not play an air on the pianoforte. Her father and mother were strangers to her. Her pet dog was angrily thrust away. She was ignorant of the use of knives and forks. She was simply a new born infant, with this difference, that she could acquire knowledge rapidly.

Her education was commenced anew. Arithmetic, history, geography, French and music were eagerly studied, and a new circle of friends was gradually formed. Here, again, there was an abnormal fastidiousness. The friends of her former self were distasteful, and a young gentleman who had loved her, and whom she had treated with cruel ridicule, suddenly became her prime favorite. It soon became known that Mr. George Henderson and Miss Jennie Robson were engaged. The young man's parents consulted Dr. Forbes Winslow, and the young people were advised to postpone the nuptials. Parental opposition precipitated the union. A runaway match made them man and wife in May, 1856.

At the birth of their first son, the poor mother remained unconscious for six weeks. Similar symptoms followed the birth of a daughter in 1860. One morning she awoke in her former natural state, without any intimation from memory or consciousness that anything unusual had happened. The four years of her married life were to her as though they had never been. She shrieked with rage when her husband approached. She designated her children as "somebody's little brats." The house was strange to her. She did not recognize her own dresses or her own handwriting. She took up life again at the precise point where she had left when she fell into the mesmeric slumber, and tried to scale the garden wall. Existence with her husband was unbearable, and she was taken back to her mother. Parental interference resulted in a judicial separation between the husband and wife.

Miss Jennie Robson, as she again called herself, was annoyed by any reference to her abnormal individuality, and her parents yielded to her entreaties to leave the town and reside in the south of England.

Near Dartmouth she gained all her former health and spirits. Possessing a graceful form and a pretty face she soon became the focus of masculine admiration, and finally a wealthy young farmer offered his hand. Pere Robson, in spite of Jennie's tears and entreaties, insisted that Frederick Hood should be informed of her previous mental derangement and marriage. The poor fellow was too deep in love to fear consequences. Then a new obstacle arose in a legal form. Her husband heard of the intended marriage and threatened Frederick Hood and Jennie with proceedings if the match was consummated. Whereupon Mr. Hood with Jennie emigrated to this country. Soon after they proceeded to Southern Minnesota, and established themselves on a fruitful farm. But alas! misfortune overtook them. In August last Mr. Hood was out driving with his wife in a buggy when the horse ran away, the vehicle was upset and Mrs. Hood was thrown violently to the ground, receiving a severe contusion on the back of the head. She remained unconscious for two weeks. When she recovered consciousness it was even as he feared. She did not know him from Adam, as he expressed it, and "I could no more convince her that I was her husband than I could stop the earth in its orbit."

Whenever he approached her she repulsed him with anger for spiriting her away from home. All the old affection for her children and her former husband returned, and poor Hood had no peace till he started with her on her way back to England. The pair reached this city from the west on Thursday last, and a friend of Mr. Hood's who saw the pair informed the writer that the coldest and most severe politeness existed between the whilom man and wife. Nothing, however, can persuade the lady that she is not the victim of Hood's machinations, and her memory reverts back to the immediate circumstances preceding the birth of her baby in 1860.

A MAGIC DINING ROOM.

Some months since an Englishman named Atkinson bought a country place near [illegible] in France. For many weeks thereafter carpenters and masons were busily employed in repairing and altering the chateau, and after their work had been completed Mr. Atkinson issued invitations for a large dinner party to all the most prominent families in the neighborhood. The guests arrived at 6 o'clock, and on taking their seats at the dining table noticed with surprise that there was not even one servant to be seen. The soup was consumed in silent astonishment. When all had partaken of it the host sounded a whistle, and as if by magic the soup plates disappeared, and three enormous silver platters, each containing a roast goose, appeared. Little cries of terror were heard from the ladies. Mr. Atkinson took no notice of his guests' surprise, but remarking that it was a very warm evening, whistled again, and the whole ceiling disappeared, the host's black [illegible] vanished at the same moment, leaving him [illegible] a whole seat. The guests [illegible] from their chairs when they found themselves, the chairs and the table suddenly raised five feet above the floor. They, however, were soon lowered again to the floor and all took refuge in hasty flight from the demoniac abode. A judicial investigation was instituted, and it was found that Mr. Atkinson had been for ten years the chief machinist at Covent Garden Theater in London, where he had amassed a nice little fortune. The dinner was a little freak to indulge his fondness for his old pursuit.

A snow slide in the San Juan country carried Mr. McGovern down 1,000 feet, but as extraordinary good fortune would have it he was on top of the heap all the time, and was landed at the foot of the mountain in a comparatively good state of preservation.

THE TERRITORIES.

Bread is a luxury in the Black Hills. Flour is selling for $[illegible] per hundred.

The coal mines of Fremont county yielded 80,000,000 pounds of "black diamonds" last year.

The schooner just built at Utsalady has been named the Mary Parker. She is of 113 tons measurement.

Mr. Underwood, while laying water pipe at Port Blakely, discovered a bed of fine clay, as good as any for the making of pottery.

A scheme is on foot to remove the army headquarters from Omaha to Salt Lake, and the new quarters now being put up at Camp Douglas are said to be for the accommodation of the new officers.

A Winnemucca telegram says that Sheriff C. H. Hays left that place for Silver City on the 11th by stage with M. C. Hughes, charged with being one of the murderers of De Ford at South Montana, Idaho.

The finest timber in the world is found in the Black Hills, according to a Cheyenne paper. Some of the pine trees are ten feet in diameter and so tall that the man working at the butt can't hear the man who is chopping the top up into cord wood.

The Tacoma Library Association has purchased from Hon. E. L. Smith's library the complete journals of the Royal Geographical Society from its organization up to a couple of years ago. This will be a grand addition to Tacoma library and a credit to the association.

A letter to the Cheyenne Leader, dated at Hills City, Black Hills, says: "I would have written before, but had no opportunity of sending. The weather is cold and stormy, making mining impossible until spring. The excitement here is at fever heat, in regard to city lots and ranches."

A man named Wm. Pierce was drowned last Sunday night at Port Blakely. About 10 o'clock he left the hotel for his lodging place, carrying in his hand a burning candle. The next morning he was picked up dead on the beach near the mill company's store, close to the spot from which he undoubtedly fell into the water.

Wyoming and Colorado having had their say about big strikes, Arizona booms up with this: The famous and long-sought-for Planchas La Plata Mine in Arizona, which Spanish history says yielded pure silver in such huge pieces, two hundred years ago, that the crown confiscated it for its own use, has been discovered about ninety miles southeast of Tucson, near the Sonora line.

While at Port Townsend on Thursday last week, the captain of the schooner Letitia drew up with his anchor another anchor and five fathoms of chain that had been lost there perhaps twenty years before. The chain was nearly eaten up by rust, while the anchor was covered all over with barnacles. Evidently the anchor was new when left there by its previous owner, and is yet good. It weighs about 300 pounds.

They had quite a sensation at Salt Lake recently. A young man named Charles R. Hopkins, a Gentile, has invaded the premises of Brigham Young and carried off a pretty grand daughter of the old "prophet." The feat was accomplished much against the wishes of all the male and female Youngs in the Mormon tribe, with the exception of the young lady most interested, and she seems to have been determined to marry the Gentile.

The editor of the Laramie Sun, an enthusiastic advocate of Wyoming interests, takes a hopeful view of the future of that Territory. With mines underlying almost every hill, wide-stretching plains and warm valleys, covered with excellent grass, uplands affording shelter for the finest game on the continent, he sees no reason to fear as to success in the future. Every year adds to the number of dwelling-houses and ranches. Civilization is rapidly spreading on both sides of the railroad, and in a few years the whole Territory will be dotted with thrifty villages and fertile farms.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

About $10,000 changed hands on the result of the late election in Victoria.

The Vancouver Coal Company has presented the corporation of Nanaimo with five acres of land for a public cemetery.

A letter on the 28th ult. from Nicola valley, to the Colonist, reports the weather delightful, snow light and stock doing well.

The Standard says the Grappler was driven nearly to Cape Mudge by a storm while towing a vessel to the inlet a few days ago.

G. M. Dawson, Esq., of Victoria, shipped per steamship City of Panama nine packages of timber specimens, for the centennial exhibition.

Shipment of treasure from Victoria by Wells, Fargo & Co. per steamship City of Panama, for San Francisco, February 18th, 1875: Bank of British North America, $14,619; Bank of British Columbia, $6,574. Total, $21,193.

The steamship Dakota will take the place of the City of Panama next trip, sailing from San Francisco for Victoria about the 27th inst. The City of Panama will lay up one trip to have accommodations for 42 additional cabin passengers arranged.

On the evening of Sunday, the 13th inst., a canoe laden with shingles left Sooke in charge of a colored man named Charles Mitchell and a white man known as Bill. On Friday the remains of the canoe and some of the shingles were picked up at Church Hill, Beechy Bay, but no tidings of the men have been heard of hitherto, and it is most probable that they are both lost, as a canoe sent out to search for them has returned without any news.

The cutter Wolcott, which started last week in search of the schooner Emma, got aground near Cape Mudge on the night of the 10th inst., during the prevalence of a fearful snow storm, which rendered the shore line invisible. The sea, which was running high at the time, was breaking over the vessel, and it was only by the decisive action of the captain, supported by the officers and men, that the vessel was saved from destruction. Ten tons of coal and one gun were thrown overboard when the vessel was gotten off and returned to Victoria to ascertain the extent of damage.

AN ELOQUENT APPEAL FOR PEACE AND BROTHERHOOD.

SPEECH OF MR. ROBBINS (N. C.) ON CENTENNIAL.

Mr. Chairman: In North Carolina there lives an old man who in 1861 had six sons just grown up to manhood. At the first tap of the drum the six sons went to the front to fight for the cause of the South. They did not stop to reason much about it. North Carolina called for them and they went. Most of them were over here at the first battle of Bull Run, and from there to Appomattox they followed that bloody and fiery track of war all the way by Chickahominy, Fredericksburg, Antietam, Chancellorsville, Chickamauga, Gettysburg, Wilderness and Petersburg. There were six when they got to Appomattox; there were but two. Four were sleeping in their bloody blankets—one at Antietam, another at Chancellorsville, another on the Chickahominy, and another in Kentucky. Two were at Appomattox, little spared to see the flag go down forever which they had followed with such unfaltering devotion. One of those two survivors stands here and speaks to you now, and he says that he has seen enough of war and wants peace. He wants reconciliation. He wants good feeling; he wants fraternity everywhere in this country. And that is the reason, Mr. Chairman, I propose this bill, because I think its tendency is to produce that peace which we need. Why have we not had it? At Appomattox, Mr. Chairman, when we were waiting to see whether old "Uncle Robert" was going to tell us to charge or to surrender, and did not know which, I went into a little church which stood close by, and there lay a Bible on the stand and I opened it. The words which fell first on my eye were these, and they seemed prophetic: "Lo! the winter is past, the rain is over and gone, the flowers appear on the earth, the time of the singing of birds has come and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land." I thought, Mr. Chairman, it was prophetic. I welcomed it as the harbinger of peace. Why is it not peace? Why have we not had peace? The soldiers fought the great question out with bayonets and muskets and cannon, but they have quit fighting. It is because a few political agitators still want to keep up the fight, and their only weapons are jawbones. [Great laughter.] I have no capacity, Mr. Chairman, to participate in that kind of battle, and I am opposed to it as an unworthy afterpiece to a grand drama. I want peace. It is urged, Mr. Chairman, that we need to save this money—this million and a half dollars. We do need economy, but we need also concord, confidence, good understanding in this country. Oh! if we had faith enough in one another, if there was faith in this country, in its different sections, and among all its people, the money would come forth from the coffers where it is now hoarded, the hard times would pass away, and general prosperity would return. The people who sent me here, it is true, sent me to help economize, but they sent me here also, or else I have misunderstood them, to promote peace and help bring about reconciliation and good understanding. I vote for this bill, also, Mr. Chairman, as a North Carolinian. North Carolina has a large interest in those glories which are to be celebrated on the Fourth of July next. Let it not be forgotten that she first spoke the word "independence" at Mecklenburgh. Let it not be forgotten that she shed the first blood for liberty at Alamance. Let it not be forgotten that her sons, the mountain men, with the aid of a few gallant sons of Virginia and South Carolina, turned the tide of the revolution toward final victory at King's Mountain. And we are coming to the centennial, Mr. Chairman, though we are poor, and some of us will come in tears, remembering the past. Yet we are coming, the sons of the men of King's Mountain, and of Guilford, and of Alamance, to shake hands with the men of the Brandywine, and Bunker Hill, and Monmouth, and restore peace in this country. It has been said, Mr. Chairman, that the soldiers could have settled this thing if allowed to do so. Well, that will be a good time for them to settle it. I want to go there and shake by the hand the brave men I used to meet on the field. I admire them, I love them, I respect and I honor them. O sir, with what reverence I stand always by the soldier's grave, whether he wore the gray or the blue, because there sleeps a man who dared to die for his principles. [Great applause.] I think of these things, Mr. Chairman, without bitterness, because you cannot tell me that any man died in vain in that war. This American people of ours is a money-loving, money-getting people, too fond of merely material interests, too sordid, and it needed the great lesson of self sacrifice, that it is worth while to die for sentiment and for principle. Our dead heroes have taught us that lesson. Yes, Mr. Chairman, we are coming from Cape Fear and the Albemarle, from the lowlands and the mountains. You will hear the bagpipes of our Scotchmen and the bugles of our mountaineers swelling the blast of the national jubilee. We want to shake hands with the gallant soldiers of the North. We hope to see such a greeting of the soldiers and patriots of the North and the South as will show to the whole Union that the flood-tide of sectional hatred has ebbed forever, and that it remains no longer to float any freightage of unholy and unpatriotic ambition. And we want to show to the multitude of visitors from other nations how invincible we are when the heroes of the blue and the gray stand together in one common phalanx of amity and concord. Then, my countrymen, let us renew our vows of fervent devotion to that common country which the righteous Arbiter of all things has decreed shall be forever one and undivided, and, turning our backs upon all bitter memories of the past, and leaving our gallant fallen comrades on both sides to repose in "trembling hope" on "the bosom of their Father and their God," let us go forward with courageous hearts and patriotic aspirations in that path which duty and destiny have marked out for us. [Much applause.]

"THE PERSONALITY OF THE DEVIL."

Another ecclesiastical case of much interest and importance relates to the personality of the devil. The judicial committee of the privy council, consisting on this occasion of the two archbishops and several law lords and judges, has been hearing, during the week, an appeal from the judgment of the Arches Court, in Jenkins against Cook. Mr. Jenkins is a respectable solicitor at Clifton (Bristol), who does not think that all parts of the bible are fit for family reading, and who has compiled an edition in which a good deal is omitted, including every passage referring to hell and the devil. Mr. Jenkins sits under Rev. Mr. Cook, and did not at all like a sermon which Mr. Cook preached, making a great deal of the devil and insisting on his personality. Mr. Jenkins criticised this sermon in a letter to Mr. Cook, and a controversy ensued, in which Mr. Cook refused to admit Jenkins to the communion table, as being an evil liver and defamer of the book of common prayer. It was contended on the part of Mr. Jenkins that a clergyman had no right to set himself up as a judge of heresy, and that Mr. Jenkins had a perfect right to hold his opinion upon the devil and hell. The court has not yet given its decision, but the language of the Lord Chancellor and some of the other lay members was very significant. The Lord Chancellor asked the counsel for Mr. Cook whether a member of the Church of England could be repelled from the Lord's Supper because he did not believe in transubstantiation, and the counsel replied that he would rather not answer the question. He also said: "There are men who hold good opinions and live evil lives, and there are also men, I suppose, who hold wrong opinions and lead good lives." When Dr. Stephens quoted the act of Uniformity which speaks of people "following their own sensuality," and abstaining from going to church, Lord Penzance asked whether it was considered an act of sensuality not to go to church, evidently with a sense of personal interest in the question. Even the Archbishop of Canterbury suggested with apparent approval that the counsel for Mr. Jenkins should use the words of the pleadings and call upon the court not to condemn as penal "the expression of a hope that even the ultimate pardon of the wicked who are condemned in the day of judgment will be consistent with the will of Almighty God." In a former case which was tried some years ago, and in which the question of the devil turned up, Lord Westbury threw all his weight into the scales against the Satanic personality, and in a proposed epitaph it was recorded of him that he had "dismissed hell with costs and taken away from pious members of the church of England their last hope of everlasting damnation."

THE FUGITIVE SLAVE RESOLUTION IN PARLIAMENT

The ultra philanthropists in the British Parliament are greatly exercised over the circular lately issued by the Admiralty. The point made by them is that any slave who has once set foot on the deck of an English ship no matter where the ship may be, is absolutely free and that therefore the order of the Admiralty instructing the commanders of English ships to return such slaves as may come on board while the ship is in the waters of a friendly slave-holding power is the quintessence of iniquity.

At first sight it may seem strange that the Admiralty should have issued an order of this kind. It may seem inconsistent in the government of a country whose people regard slavery as a sin and whose laws prohibit it within its territory to order the return of slaves fleeing from bondage to their masters. It was calculated to excite the sentimental and to stir up the oracles of Exeter Hall and the disciples of the Earl of Shrewsbury to infinite volubility. Not content with the Englishman's panacea for all social and political ills,—writing to the Times—the good people whom this order offended have procured the introduction of a resolution in the House of Commons on this subject to the effect that the present government have done a very bad thing of which they ought to be ashamed and which ought to be immediately undone. Many speeches have already been made upon the question involved and doubtless many more will follow, in all of which there is, and will be, more gush than sentiment, and more sentiment than reason.

The state of the case is just this. English men of-war must go to the ports of slave holding countries—they cannot stop away. While they are there, slaves are liable to, and do, go on board of them. Once on board, the question arises what must be done with the slaves? The English philanthropists say the commanders of the ships must keep them—the English government, through the order of the Admiralty, says send them back. And the difference between the two has called forth the resolution alluded to.

Up to the present time no final action has been taken in the matter, and it may still be a little doubtful how the House of Commons will vote.

It is hard to see how the Admiralty could order the commanders of the ships to do otherwise. Upon the high seas, or when in British waters, or in those of unfriendly nations, the slave coming on board of an English ship should, in accordance with English laws, be declared free. But when the ship is in the waters of a friendly power, the case is altogether different. In the former case there would be no laws except those of his own country, which the ship's commander would be bound to respect, and those would give the slave his freedom. In the latter case, the laws of the friendly power within whose territory the ship is, would have to be regarded in some degree, at least. A certain degree of deference would be due to them. The ship could not be made the refuge of the property of the people of the country without giving just cause, in the estimation of the world, for war. The very first case in which demand should be made for the return of a fugitive and refused, might give rise to a war, in which England would be in the position of a country fighting for the maintenance of an assumed right to meddle with and manage other people's affairs.

The good sense which is characteristic of the English will soon make them see the justice and the wisdom of the action of the Admiralty, and much as they may wish it were possible to do otherwise, they will, it is believed, finally agree that the Admiralty did in the matter what the laws of nations required of them.

THE "SILVER QUESTION."

A reporter on one of the San Francisco dailies recently interviewed a large number of the prominent bankers, capitalists and business men generally of that city upon the cause of the depreciation in silver. Among the causes assigned for the depreciation were "that more silver is produced than there is a demand for, supply and demand regulate the price of an article as water finds its level and the attempt is made under these circumstances to make a silver dollar equal to a gold one when in reality it is worth but little over ninety cents, and the demonetization of silver in Germany and other countries of Europe—and the great amount of silver thus thrown upon the market together with the production of the mines of Nevada. This has caused a depreciation of the valuation of the standard ounce in the London market and London rules the world in fixing the value of silver. Where formerly silver was worth $1 26 it was now only worth $1 09 to $1 11.

The remedies suggested were quite as various as causes. One banker gives it as his opinion that if Congress would pass a law directing the retirement of all bank bills and currency under the denomination of $5 to be done in such reasonable time as to allow of the coining of silver to take their place and directing the Secretary of the Treasury to purchase the silver necessary and have it minted on government account it would be a successful placing of from sixty to eighty millions which would be banked with pleasure if not with delight by people in the Atlantic States and the taking of a bold and easy step toward specie resumption [illegible]. Another thought that the legal tender act should not be changed unless the limit was placed at $20 [illegible] [illegible] barred from exporting it to silver consuming countries as they are now by the debased condition of the half and quarter dollar and neither the government nor the people need longer dread an over supply of silver.

The question appears to be considered a very important one and its effects are felt in all quarters from the clerk or laborer who performs receives his wages in this coin until it reaches the centers of distribution the banks and brokers passing through the regular channels of trade the small retail dealer the wholesale dealer the commission merchant and the producers. All are similarly affected and all have an intense interest not only to know the cause of the sudden glut and the heavy discount but also a still greater to find a remedy for the same at the earliest possible moment.

MINISTER SCHENCK.

A Congressional committee has been appointed to investigate the transactions of Mr Schenck in connection with the Emma mine swindle. The following extract from the New York Tribune will show the nature of the improper transactions with which the charged General Schenck was connected. The extract is part of a copy of the answer filed by the Tribune Association in an action brought by Trenor W. Park for libel. After setting forth the formal parts of the answer and also the libelous matter complained of the Tribune the defendant goes on to say:

That the plaintiff conceived, designed and put in operation a scheme to cheat and defraud the purchasers of said mine and the persons who should become stockholders of the said company and to that end among other things entered into a corrupt and wicked agreement with one Robert C. Schenck the minister from the government of the United States to the government of Great Britain, theretofore a stranger to the plaintiff, whereby the said minister should become a director and shareholder in said company with the view of securing the great name and official influence of the said minister to assist him and his confederates in fraudulently disposing of said mine and the shares of the said company to persons purchasing said mine. That the plaintiff to secure the said minister and the influence of his official position as aforesaid and to become a shareholder in said company loaned and advanced to him the sum of £10 000 sterling and equal to the sum of $50 000 gold coin of the United States or thereabouts and also entered into a secret agreement or arrangement with said minister by which the plaintiff agreed to guarantee to the said minister interest or dividends on such shares at the rate of 18 per centum per annum, and thereafter the said plaintiff and the said minister and other directors of the said company issued at London and circulated in England and in Europe a prospectus setting forth among other things, the objects of said company the great value of the said mine and asking for subscriptions to the shares of the stock of the said company, and in the said prospectus it was falsely and fraudulently estimated that the said mine would produce the enormous amount of £700 000 net or equal to $3 500 000 of gold coin of the United States.

That very shortly after the said American minister became such director and agreed to lend the powerful influence of his name and official position to said scheme he received communications from various sources and particularly from the Hon Hamilton Fish, Secretary of State, regarding his connection with said Company. That thereupon and about the 2d of December, 1871 the said minister concluded to resign his position of director of the Emma Silver Mining Company (limited) of London and a letter of resignation was prepared and submitted to said plaintiff for his approval, that said plaintiff modified and changed or suggested modifications and changes in said letter which were made. That at the time when the said minister had concluded to resign as such director, and had telegraphed to his government at Washington that he had so resigned, there were proposals for subscriptions and allotments for shares in said company outstanding, and which allotments, by the terms of such subscriptions and allotments, would not be made for several days thereafter and the said plaintiff, knowing the disastrous effect of the sudden withdrawal of said minister from said company and as an officer thereof upon the stock of the company induced said minister to withhold such resignation and the knowledge thereof from the British public till after the allotment of such stock was made and the money paid in. That the said plaintiff in the latter part of the year 1872, having sold and disposed of all or nearly all of his shares in said company, returned to New York and in the month of December, 1872 or thereabouts and knowing that the dividend for December, 1872, and which was not payable till on or about the first day of January, 1875, would not be paid, and knowing the disastrous effect that the knowledge of that fact would have on the price of the shares selling in the London market and with the view of enabling the said Schenck and other confederates of the plaintiff to sell and dispose of their shares at the then high prices of $20 per share or thereabouts and to enable them to gamble and speculate in said shares sent, or caused to be sent by telegraph to said Schenck and his other confederates in London and thereabouts secret information that the said dividend would be passed and not be paid thus enabling them to dispose of their shares at such high prices and enabled them to speculate and gamble in said shares and to cheat and defraud the British public and the said persons, acting on secret information did on the receipt of such information, and before the knowledge of the fact became public sell their said shares or a large portion of them at the then high prices.

It has been suggested, as one of the ways to solve the Eastern question, to form a new nation on the Lower Danube. This would compose the South Sclaves in Turkey and Austria, who number about ten or twelve millions, all of whom except about three quarters of a million are Christians. This proposed plan, like every other plan since the time when Father Noah began to build his big flatboat, has met with objections. It has been said that a Slavic State would repeat the barbarism and confusion of the insurgent States and that it would be just as well to have anarchy under the Sultan as under a Slavonian Prince. But it is by no means sure that such anarchy would exist. The experiment of a free Slavic community has been tried in the case of the State of Servia and has succeeded admirably.

Col Dyer, in the closing argument in the Babcock case, skillfully avoids the rock which Mr Storrs sought to put in his way and hoped he would split upon. It was evident from the tenor of Mr Storrs speech that he was trying to induce Col Dyer to assail the President in reply to his defense of him thinking that the case of his client as it would would be benefited thereby. But Col Dyer was not to be drawn off in that manner from the real issue in the case, the guilt or innocence of Babcock and after a few sentences in allusion to this effort of Storrs proceeded at once and vigorously with his argument.

PLUMMER FRUIT DRYER.

AS A PROOF OF WHAT I HAVE HERETOFORE stated to the people of Oregon I give below a letter from the Plummer Fruit Drying Co of East Portland. After the close of business of 1875, fully endorsing it after using it one entire season and as a proof to substantiate what they say they now contemplate putting up another Dryer of the same capacity of the one they now have which will increase their capacity to five hundred bushels of apples per day. Having now located the Fruit Dryer [illegible] [illegible]

Having become somewhat acquainted with the wants of the people I find that such a DRYER is what is wanted [illegible] and a large amount of it I have so modified my Dryer as to meet that demand [illegible] [illegible] and is large an amount of it and the price is within the reach of all.

W S PLUMMER Patentee, Portland Oregon

FRUIT DRYER TESTIMONIALS

EAST PORTLAND Jan 4th 1876

MR W S PLUMMER—Dear Sir: As this is a time when all are much interested in Fruit Drying we think that in justice to you and for the information of the public it is but right and proper that we should give all the information that we can. Now after having operated your Dryer during this season we feel warranted in saying that for the amount of money invested we still believe as we did from the start that your Dryer is the best Dryer yet introduced into this country. The capacity of the Dryer we find to be about 80 eight bushels per hour. The Dried fruit we claim to be as good as any though perhaps not as much bleached as the Alden Fruit and we are satisfied that we can produce Dried Fruit at less expense than the Alden. The stockholders of our Company manifested their confidence in the Plummer Dryer at our meeting last Saturday by a unanimous vote to increase the capital stock $1[illegible] twelve thousand dollars for the purpose of adding one more Dryer to the [illegible] at [illegible] and making other improvements for next season. We will further say that we believe that by an improvement made by the patentee in the Heater and [illegible] that there will be an increase of capacity and a saving of Fuel.

H HANSON President

J S NEWELL Secretary and Superintendent

EAST PORTLAND Dec 18 1875

MR PLUMMER—Dear Sir: I have been watching both the Alden and your Fruit Dryer the past season so as to determine which was the best Machine for drying Prunes. I visited the Alden Dryer at Oregon City and examined the Prunes dried on that Machine and I have also examined several lots dried on your Machine at East Portland and my opinion is that your Dryer is far the best Machine for drying Prunes. My reasons are these: Your Machine dries them without bursting or cracking while I noticed that a great deal of the fruit dried on the Alden Machine was bursted open and after a Prune is bursted in drying it is worthless for market as a Prune therefore I can recommend your Machine for drying Prunes or any thing else.

CITY.

Boy Convict Pardoned.—Last spring four boys—Willie Reynard, Frank Carroll, John Dougherty and Geo Conner—were convicted of larceny in the State circuit court and sentenced to the penitentiary from this city. Subsequently Willie Reynard was pardoned by Gov Grover and Mr Hiram Smith of Harrisburg, adopted him. Since that time the lad has been working on Mr Smith's farm and has deported himself much to his own credit and the satisfaction of his adopted parents, having proven industrious and trustworthy. Tuesday Gov Grover pardoned Frank Carroll. In speaking of the matter a Salem exchange says: "Young Carroll has exhibited good conduct while in prison and appears not to be a bad boy by nature, but a victim of bad associations and a proper subject for a reformatory school. He is well connected. His parents live in California. Mr Zeiber of the Clarendon Hotel with other friends in Portland, have taken an interest in him and have arranged that he go to California and be taken in charge by a friend of the family, to be placed upon a ranch where he will be actively and usefully employed. Accompanied by Mr Andrus and several other citizens Mr Zeiber went out to the penitentiary after having secured the lad's pardon. Young Carroll had received no previous intimation of the good fortune in store until the news was abruptly broken to him. He was so overjoyed that he leaped about and wept tears of delight. John Dougherty and Geo Conner, Carroll's companions in crime and imprisonment, cried bitterly when they learned that they must separate and the scene which followed is said to have been quite touching." Carroll was brought down Tuesday afternoon and to-day will leave on the steamer for California to rejoin his parents. It is to be hoped that the lad will profit by his own recent bitter experience in treading the pathway of crime, and in the future avoid evil and corrupting associations.

Pleasant Episodes.—At the Centennial festival given by the ladies of the Unitarian church, last Tuesday evening the Washington Guard, under command of Captain Cook marched into the hall and performed several military maneuvers in their skillful manner and thereby added to the variety and pleasure of the entertainment. After going through the manual of arms, marching and countermarching, the Guards in due form marched out, led by two drums and a fife. At the party given the next evening at the same place, by the Guards, the ladies and gentlemen who assumed the Revolutionary characters at the festival, collected in costume and returned the call of the Guards in a very appropriate manner, by proceeding to the hall in costume, and under inspiration of suitable music, danced for the edification of those present the elegant and graceful minuet, then joined in a modern quadrille and soon afterward took their departure. The call and the return were very well devised, and were pleasant episodes in the progress of both the festival and the ball, and will be remembered by the persons who originated and carried out the idea as very appropriate.

Body Found.—The body of an unknown man was found a few days ago near the head of Walker's Island, about 56 miles below this city. The remains were placed on board the steamer Shoo Fly and brought up to this city reaching here last evening. It is thought the body is that of the German, John Staeven, who, it will be remembered, fell from the O S N Co's dock last November and perished. Soon after the remains reached here, Mr. Levi Ankeny, who was appointed administrator of the estate of Staeven, notified Coroner Wetmore, and requested that an inquest be held. As nothing whatever is known of the body, the coroner has wisely concluded to defer the inquest for several days and allow the remains to lie at the undertaker's for identification. Deceased has on a pair of No 9 boots with the letters "O. K." made with tacks driven in the soles. The body is in a good state of preservation. Any information which will lead to the identification of the body will be thankfully received by the coroner.

We Guess Not.—Under the heading of "An Anti-Chinese Oregonian," the San Francisco Bulletin of the 17th inst., says: "A man giving the name of John Armstrong was arrested last night, charged with assaulting a Chinaman named Ah Fat. It appeared that the Chinaman was going along Steuart street, when he was met by Armstrong, who struck him in the face. After being arrested he made the remark that he could get even on the Chinese when he got back to Oregon. That he could tip two or three of them off a boat and they would never be missed. A charge of carrying a concealed weapon was also entered against him, and he was ordered to appear for sentence on both charges to-morrow morning." If Mr (?) Armstrong will pay Portland a visit, and try the little experiment of tipping Chinamen off of the wharf we engage that the "minions of the law" will make it exceedingly interesting for him.

Deep Draught Vessel.—The ship Samuel Watts, 2,085 tons register, now under charter to the Salem Flouring Mills Co to load wheat at Astoria, is a larger vessel than has ever yet entered the Columbia river, and is said when loaded to draw 26 feet of water. At present she is at San Francisco, but will sail for the Columbia river in a few days. She will if fully loaded, carry 100,000 bushels of wheat.

Correct Time.—Mr B L Stone has received one of Bliss & Co's transit instruments with which the time will be taken at noon by the sun, and in the evening by the north star. Mr Stone will have erected an observatory, opposite his store, for the purpose.

New Paintings.—Mr R C White is engaged in painting a series of twelve pictures 6x7 feet, each descriptive of scenes in ancient history for Mr E C Holden of Astoria who will deliver a course of lectures on Masonry.

First Boat for Wallula.—It is the intention of the O S N Co to start the steamer Owyhee from Celilo on Saturday March 4th—first trip of the season.

AMUSEMENTS.

Elsewhere is published the programme of the second concert for the benefit of the Portland Library. We should judge it will be even better than the first and no doubt the attendance will be much more flattering. The sale of reserved seats will take place at Hunder's drug store from 9 A M to 4 P M to-day and Friday. There is no extra charge for reserved seats.

New Market Theatre was comfortably filled last evening on the occasion of the benefit tendered Prof McGibeny and family by the citizens of Portland. One does not often see a more refined and appreciative audience than was assembled last evening at that fashionable and justly popular place of amusement. On the occasion of the farewell performance given by Prof McGibeny and his gifted family a most excellent programme was presented. It is unnecessary [illegible] the little folks did capitally and the audience was not slow in showing their appreciation [illegible] and well timed plaudits. Notes on Lima.—The ladies of Lima still cling to their beloved mantilla for street wear and their superb dark eyes shine forth under its tiny lace fringe, just disclosing enough of the face to arouse curiosity. It is a very coquettish head dress and how deliciously mysterious they drape it! There are many fresh young faces to be seen, and the flesh shows through their olive skins with the languid splendor of sunset in the tropics. After thirty the señoras tend towards embonpoint; their beauty fades and they become devout. As for the men folk, they usually have an uncomfortably scaly look, which eventually gives way to a dull, leathery complexion. ### PORTLAND.

Chas I Bell Esq, correspondent of the San Francisco Journal of Commerce who was recently here thus describes our city:

The city of Portland is justly a source of great pride to all Oregonians. The growth of this beautiful city has been remarkable. One of the early founders of the city was from Portland, Maine, hence its name. It is situated on the river Willamette, 11 miles above its junction with the Columbia, being at the head of ship navigation, it is the commercial center of all the vast country watered by these rivers. The location is particularly attractive, the banks of the river at this point being peculiarly adapted to have a large city upon their slopes. The city has now about 15,000 inhabitants, and the assessed valuation of its property is over $12,000,000. Ships from all parts of the world can be seen here discharging their cargoes of valuable merchandise and leaving again loaded with grain, furs, lumber, etc. A most complete system of river navigation is established by the Oregon Steam Navigation Company, their steamers being perfect floating palaces and connecting all the various towns on the river with Portland. Besides the river lines, various deep sea lines run regularly from Portland to San Francisco, Victoria (British Columbia), Sitka (Alaska), etc. Steamers leave Portland for Kalama, the terminus of the Northern Pacific Railroad, which connects with steamers for all towns on Puget Sound. Besides having a complete chain of steamship routes Oregon has a perfect network of railroads. The Oregon and California Railroad being built as far south as Roseburg, a thriving burg. Engineers are now out on the road preparatory to continuing the line south to connect with the line at Redding, California. Another important railroad running out of Portland is the Oregon Central Railroad, which runs southwesterly into the Yamhill district, probably as rich a farming district as there is in the world. In addition to this there is every probability that a line will be soon commenced from Portland to Winnemucca, to connect with the Central Pacific. The proposed route meets with a great deal of approbation as it will open up to settlement a wonderfully fertile region which at present used for stock ranges, etc. Portland with the backing of such an immensely fertile country, must undoubtedly some day be a very large city. A person arriving here for the first time and finding himself in the center of the city can scarcely believe that the city is as small as it is, such is the metropolitan air surrounding him. The streets are all well laid out, the principal business streets being Front street and First street, the former having on it palatial wholesale houses and the latter having on it all the principal retail houses. Some of the buildings are very elegant, the principal among them being the Custom House, St Helen's Hall, City Market and Theater, all buildings that would grace the largest city. Congress has lately been petitioned to authorize the establishment of a government assay office here, and undoubtedly it will be done, as the product of the mines of Oregon, Washington Territory and British Columbia is near four million dollars yearly, and the building, if erected, will undoubtedly be another ornament as well as much needed institution for the city. The principal newspaper published here is the OREGONIAN, a very wide awake sheet which has been in existence for over twenty years, and faithfully watches over the interests of Oregon. There is also published here a variety of other papers, some ten or twelve in all. The mercantile interests of the city are well represented by the Commercial Reporter, which though comparatively recently established already takes rank as one of the most reliable commercial journals of the country. The hotels of the city are also well up to the mark, the principal being the Cosmopolitan on Front street, which is in every respect well appointed, and the Clarendon also on Front street. The city is lighted with gas of an excellent quality and the system of water works is very complete, insuring a constant supply of the purest water. The class of business men are very shrewd and enterprising.

REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION.

A Republican State Convention is hereby called to convene in the city of Portland Wednesday, May 31 1876, at 11 o'clock A M to select six delegates to the National Republican Convention; candidates for judges of the supreme court in the second, third and fifth judicial districts; for prosecuting attorneys for the several judicial districts; three presidential electors, and a candidate for representative in Congress, and for the transaction of such other business as may come before the convention.

It is recommended that primary and county conventions in the several counties be held as follows: Primary conventions on Wednesday, April 19th, and county conventions on Wednesday, April 26th, or at such other times as the county committees may appoint.

The following is the apportionment of delegates in the said convention upon the basis of the Republican vote for representative in Congress in 187[illegible]:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Baker | [illegible] | Linn | [illegible] |
| Benton | [illegible] | Marion | [illegible] |
| Clackamas | [illegible] | Multnomah | [illegible] |
| Clatsop | [illegible] | Polk | [illegible] |
| Columbia | [illegible] | Tillamook | [illegible] |
| Coos | [illegible] | Union | [illegible] |
| Curry | [illegible] | Umatilla | [illegible] |
| Douglas | [illegible] | Wasco | [illegible] |
| Grant | [illegible] | Washington | [illegible] |
| Jackson | [illegible] | Yamhill | [illegible] |
| Josephine | [illegible] | | |
| Lake | [illegible] | Total | [illegible] |
| Lane | [illegible] | | |

In making this call for a Republican State Convention the State Central Committee realize the fact that too much importance cannot be attached to preliminary operations. This being a government of the people, by the people, for the people, the agents or officers of the government should be in accord with the people. According to the general accepted plan of selecting candidates the first steps are taken in our primary county and State conventions. These form the ground work of political organization upon which the whole superstructure must stand or fall. If honest men desire honest officials is it asking too much that they lay aside for a day all other business affairs and devote the time necessary to select proper persons to attend county and State conventions?

In view of these considerations and of the important interests at stake we earnestly appeal to all legal voters who are in sympathy with the principles of the Republican party regardless of personal likes and dislikes to rally at the primaries and see to it that none but true men are entrusted with the business of preparing for the coming political campaign. Select men who are not only true themselves in the broadest sense of that term but men of decision of character, men who can and will choose wisely for the good of the people in defiance of "rings" and cliques.

It is unnecessary at this time to reiterate in this call the principles of the Republican party; its glorious record is still fresh in the memory of an enlightened public. It is sound upon all the great principles affecting our national existence. It is the party of progress and development. It exposes corruption wherever found and inflicts punishment upon conspirators, fearful and sudden, without respect of person or position. It favors the universal enlightenment of the people without trammel of creed or sect, and its banner is found in the van leading on the hosts of reformers in all that tends to higher civilization and enlarged freedom.

A Suggestion to the Nervous.—Robust people who have all their lives eaten, digested and slept well can scarcely be expected to appreciate the blessing of strong nerves as well as those who, having undergone all the misery entailed by weakness, have eventually regained their nerve power. In order to experience the unspeakable relief of a change from an enfeebled and unrestful to a vigorous and tranquil condition of the nervous system, the nervous invalid should try a course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Under the bracing and soothing influence of that benign tonic and nervine appetite returns, digestion becomes complete and painless and sleep revisits weary eyes. The causes of nervous weakness are to be found in imperfect digestion and assimilation and the feeble performance of other vital functions resulting therefrom. The Bitters remove these causes as well as the nervous symptoms which they produce.

A FATHER'S SACRIFICE

A STORY OF FRENCH CONSCRIPTION

Up four flights of stairs in a house in Paris were three little rooms inhabited by the family Roumillo. They had only peaked roofs chimneys and the blue sky to look out upon but how pleasant were the rooms within and so neat and tasteful and sunny that there was small temptation to turn the eyes away from them

It was evening and the family were assembled at supper. They were observing a fete and the best gilt china glittered on the table a little bouquet of fresh flowers stood by each glass and an iced cake surrounded by a wreath of rosebuds distinguished the center. Around the board sat the jolly affectionate old father the delicate and loving mother their brave handsome boy and one other not yet belonging to the family but soon to be called daughter by the parents and wife by the son. She was a gentle loving young girl looking with affectionate respect upon the old folk and with fond modest eyes upon her lover

"Son," said the mother, "for 21 years this night hast thou been the delight of my heart. Thou hast gladdened my eyes every day thou hast lived. Ah! that thou wert but a few years younger, that I might be sure of thee longer!"

"Wife, dost thou not see that Marion takes thy word as a reproach to her?" said the father. "Thou would'st have thy son all for thyself thou sayest."

"I do not mean that I would not have my child Marion for my daughter," she replied. "No, no! Bless her heart, she need not blush so. And she need not fear. I think even my Robinet happy to be her husband. But the conscription, father! Our boy is of age."

The old man's happy face grew pale and uneasy.

"Wife," he said, "our boy is affectionate to us, true to Marion, and loving to God. If heaven is but just, he will not draw the fatal lot. Heaven blesses the good."

"Whom God loveth he chasteneth," said the mother with a sigh and Marion's cheek grew whiter.

"Come, do not darken a sunny day by clouds of fear," said the young man. "To-night I am free. To-night I can be the happiest fellow alive. Even if to-morrow I draw the wrong number, and must go to fight, I may return to you covered with honors. Will you not be glad and proud then?"

"My son, my son, I have known many a brave boy join those ranks drumming as thou dost, but few come back to their mothers. Oh Robinet, thou art my only one, and if thou art killed I shall be childless."

"Ah wife," said the father, forcing back his tears, "Could'st thou not be almost happy to be a widow? The conscription spares the only sons of widows. If thy useless old husband were gone, thou could'st keep thy brave young son."

"Ah, ah," cried the wife, "stop the old man's tongue. Put thy hand on his mouth, Marion. I cannot bear to hear him talk so."

"To-night let us be happy," said Robinet. "I am not yet a conscript; and I believe I shall accept to-morrow. So, begone dull care! Father, shall I cut my birthday cake?"

"Yes, my boy," said his father. "Let us not borrow trouble. It would kill me to see thee among the dissolute soldiery, driven to slaughter! I will not, no, I cannot think of it. Yes, cut thy cake, but do not harm those pretty buds. Marion placed them there in token of how she will round the life with pleasures. Eh, Marion? Each bud for a kiss or kind word, eh?"

Marion wiped her eyes and smiled blushingly. Cheerfulness was restored, and the happy family gave themselves up to enjoyment of each other, the secret thought that perhaps it was for the last, making every voice tenderer.

On the next day the drawing was to take place. Father and son proceeded to the place of decision. The son, with white cheek and dilating eye, drew, while the father stood by, his usually jovial form trembling with agonizing apprehension. It was a fatal number! and with a groan of despair the old man fell upon his son's neck.

"Oh, my boy!" he said, "I cannot let thee go! I cannot see thee driven to slaughter! Thy mother's heart will be desolate. I cannot, no, God forgive me, I cannot."

He wrung his son's hand, and, shaking his head at the few brave, consoling words Robinet's trembling lips uttered, he stopped them short by kissing him tenderly. He then went out, with a gesture forbidding any one to follow him.

"The mother will weep over her son," said a bystander—Marion's father—"but an old man, like an old dog, goes alone to grieve. He, the poor old father, idolizes thee, boy. Ah, Robinet Roumillo, there is another—a poor young girl—whose bitterest tears will be secret ones."

The youth, almost stunned with despair at his fate, returned to tell his mother and Marion. They awaited his arrival, kneeling at the feet of the Holy Mary's image, and praying with agonizing fervency.

Robinet entered quietly, and stood rigid and pale behind them, his eyes large and his nostrils quivering. The mother turned and looked at him, then fell back in a swoon. Her son raised her and laid her upon a sofa in slow recovery. Marion clung to his arm and held one of his hands in hers, weeping bitterly. None asked for the words they could not bear to hear.

"Ah, thy poor father!" the mother murmured. "I know he is weeping in secret. He was ever slow to show his grief. His heart is broken like mine. Oh that I had thy father here! We would mourn together."

There was a stir below and a sound of many footsteps coming up the staircase. It paused at the door. Robinet opened it. They were bringing home his father—dead. He had killed himself that Robinet might be exempt from conscription. He had fallen a sacrifice to an insane idea of duty. Let us not judge him too harshly. He meant well, his brain gave way. He died that his son might live. God is more merciful than man.

Thus the widow kept her son, but the memory of the father was held in a tender depth of regret in the forever saddened hearts of both mother and son.
